4. How long will we retain your data for?

The data collected for the purposes specified in this Notice in the interest of achieving EXIM's legitimate business objectives may only be processed for the period required for the data processing.

The data processed in order to establish and maintain the contract between EXIM and the Clients, and to provide EXIM's services to the Clients, shall be processed by EXIM until the claims stemming from the said contractual relationship have expired, and the personal data required for the adequate processing of complaints of our clients shall be processed for the time

You can inform yourself in detail about the retention periods assigned to each data processing purpose in Annex 2 of this Notice. If the said annex specifies the limitation period of the enforceability of a claim as the period of data processing, this means that in the event of an act interrupting the limitation period, the period of processing the personal data shall recommence and shall be extended to the new expiry date of the limitation period.

5. Who has access to the personal data?

EXIM shall take appropriate organisational and technical measures to protect the personal data. The personal data may only be accessed by authorised members of our staff with appropriate access rights, based on the principle of necessary access, to the extent permitted by the applicable law and necessary for the performance of their duties.

We take all necessary measures to protect the personal data of our Clients and to prevent unauthorised access, alteration, transmission, disclosure, deletion or destruction, accidental destruction or damage, and its becoming inaccessible due to changes in the technology used.

Accordingly, we apply, inter alia, various access rights to the data, which ensures that the data can only be accessed by an authorised person who needs to know the data in order to fulfil his or her obligation arising from his or her job.

6. Data processing and outsourcing

When processing our Clients' personal data, it may prove necessary to share the data with other persons. Such persons may be, for example, a government agency, an authority or agencies performing government tasks, the courts of Hungary, etc., to whom the transfer of data is necessary in order for us to fulfil our legal obligations.

In order to facilitate the provision of certain services or the performance of certain activities, EXIM uses the services of third parties (e.g. IT services, performance of operation-related tasks, etc.), and these third parties ("processors") process personal data under a contract concluded with EXIM, on behalf of EXIM and for a specific purpose defined by us.

In the course of their activities, the processors may, in certain cases, access and become familiar with the personal data of our Clients. In these cases, EXIM takes appropriate organisational and technological measures in the interest of protecting personal data, and requires its processors to implement similar measures.

EXIM may, based on its authorisation granted under Section 68 of the Credit Institutions Act and Section 90 of the Insurance Act, outsource any activity related to its business activity, in the course of which data management or data processing is implemented, subject to observance of the rules on data protection.

Further information on the transfer of personal data in the context of data processing and outsourcing and on the recipients of the transferred data is available in the annex of the Data protection and data security regulation, and more information on the outsourcers is available in the Schedule of the Business Regulations, both of which can be accessed under the <https://exim.hu/szabalyzatok-kondiciok> menu. In the course of processing our Clients' personal data, in certain cases it may be necessary to transfer the data to a third country outside the European Economic Area ("EEA"), or to an international organisation. In order to fulfil its commitment for the protection of personal data and the related obligations, EXIM takes the measures required to ensure an adequate level of protection of personal data transferred abroad.

We will transfer the data of our Clients to a third country outside the EEA if the European Commission has determined in a decision that the country concerned provides an adequate level of protection for personal data (“Adequacy Decision”).¹

In the absence of an adequacy decision, we shall apply the General Data Protection Regulation² issued by the European Commission when transferring data to any organisation outside the EEA.

Further information on our data transfers abroad can be requested from the Data Protection Officer.

8. Joint data processing³

Certain purposes for the processing of our Clients’ personal data and the means used in the processing are defined jointly by EXIM and [...]. The security of the personal data is a priority for both EXIM and [...] in the course of such joint processing of personal data, which is why we have set down in an agreement how our obligations and responsibilities are to be divided to ensure adequate protection of the personal data.

In the case of joint processing, the rights set out in section 9 below may be exercised against each controller independently of the aforementioned agreement. In this case, we may not continue to process the Personal Data, unless we can prove that the Processing is justified by compelling legitimate reasons which take precedence over your interests, rights and freedoms or which relate to the establishment, exercise or defence of legal claims.

If the processing of Personal Data is for scientific and historical research or statistical purposes, you have the right to object to the processing of the Personal Data concerning you for reasons related to your own situation, unless the Processing is necessary for the performance of a task conducted in the public interest.
